Info

The most emblematic name for this article born from the collaboration with Gabriel A. Serman, could only be BELLUM, the Latin noun to indicate "battle-war". An ambitious project in which we tried to enclose within this model as many elements as possible and characteristic of the various daggers that were designed and built in the past.

The shape, the design and the search for perfect symmetry means that this dagger can be held in different positions, thanks above all to the possibility of resting the thumb on the guard in two different points regardless of the size of the hand of the holder or the fact that both left handed.

One of the peculiarities of this model is the hollow formed on the front of the two G10 grips for the support of the thumb finger of the hand, allowing the user to make movements of the blade not only horizontally but also vertically.

Gabriel A. Serman is an Italian-Canadian master and instructor of police and military corps, expert in various martial arts disciplines, specializing in the use of knives and individual weapons. Despite his experience, Gabriel continues to study and collaborate with the most authoritative and recognized international instructors of martial arts and shooting with individual weapons. One of his greatest passions are daggers and in this model he tried to enclose as many elements as possible of his acquired knowledge.
